

42 C.F.R. § 136.406

Under what circumstances will the minimum standards of character be considered to be met?

The minimum standards of character shall be considered met only after the individual has been the subject of a satisfactory background investigation. The background investigation shall include a review of:

- (a) The individual's trustworthiness, through inquiries with the individual's references and places of employment and education;

This document is only available to subscribers. Please log in or purchase access.

Purchase Login