

Big Data and False Claims Act Risk Due to COVID-19 Big Data and False Claims Act Risk Due to COVID-19

Stephen Bittinger, Partner, K&L Gates.

2021-08-06

- Learn the origins of how big data became a commonplace tool for investigating healthcare fraud
- Understand how relators have used data analysis to bring False Claims Act cases
- Learn how the government collects, analyzes, and uses data as a tool to initiate False Claims Act cases
- Gain an understanding of how the government, auditors, and relators will use data analysis to hunt False Claims Act cases based on regulatory changes to reimbursement during the COVID-19 pandemic
- Learn best practices on how to use data to mitigate the risk of being a target of fraud allegations and to defend against extrapolations

This document is only available to subscribers

Purchase