COSMOS
Navigate the Compliance Universe

Compliance Today - February 2020
Employee turnover creates compliance risk

By Catherine Boerner

Catherine Boerner (cboerner@boernerconsultingllc.com) is President of Boerner Consulting, LLC, in New Berlin, WI.

- https://www.linkedin.com/in/catherineboerner/

Well-written policies and procedures are the main controls an organization can have in place to maintain compliance with risk areas. If no current well-written policies and procedures explain how to stay in compliance with a risk area, employee turnover exposes the organization to risk over time. Leadership may assume that compliance with a "well-known" law or regulation will not be misinterpreted or not followed; however, if there is no written policy and procedure plus education for new employees who directly carry out compliance with the risk area, then the likelihood of errors increases substantially.

This document is only available to members. Please log in or become a member.

Become a Member Login

Copyright © 2024 by Society of Corporate Compliance and Ethics (SCCE) & Health Care Compliance Association (HCCA). No claim to original US Government works. All rights reserved. Usage is governed under this website's Terms of Use.