Cambodia loses preferential trade status with the European Union

By Sascha Matuszak

The European Commission announced Feb. 12 that Cambodia no longer qualified for preferential trade status under the “Everything But Arms” special arrangement.^[1] The arrangement reduces tariffs and duties to zero for all products imported into the EU that are not arms. The arrangement requires that countries adhere to a list of standards and requirements enshrined in several United Nations and International Labour Organization conventions. Those conventions are the:
