Disruptive change can waylay even the most important strategic initiatives. From pandemics to social unrest to supply chain challenges, the past two years have brought enough disruption to topple many an initiative. This presentation will discuss best practices for futureproofing your initiative to be resilient, even during times of disruptive change. While no one can foretell what disruptions the future might bring, there are steps that can be taken today to make your initiatives resilient.

- Real-world strategies for designing resilience into your initiatives
- How to plan for the unplannable
- Avoiding key mistakes that can hobble your initiative in the future
- Case studies and other examples
