

Compliance Today – June 2022 Distracted compliance

By Gerry Zack

Please feel free to contact me anytime to share your thoughts: +1 612.357.1544 (cell), +1 952.567.6215 (direct), gerry.zack@corporatecompliance.org.

- twitter.com/gerry_zack
- linkedin.com/in/gerryzack

I recently heard the story of someone who had an interview for a job as a lab technician. And the story reminded me of an important aspect of compliance risk assessments, one that is often difficult to assess.

As part of the employment interview, the person was asked to perform a simple lab test in front of the two employees who were conducting the interview. The interviewee was slightly surprised by this, but she proceeded to carry out the test without any problems.

This document is only available to members. Please log in or become a member.

Become a Member Login