- This presentation offers attendees – regardless of which sector of the health care industry or other industry they operate within: An introduction to the topic of health inequity, with particular emphasis on the life-or-death consequences that have been well documented in the research to-date,
- Problematizes the harmful effects of implicit bias to your organization and the communities you serve – which, although less pernicious than explicit bias, is far more pervasive and potentially insurmountable if not interrupted,
- Defines the values of diversity, equity, and inclusion, and proposes a value-proposition for why now is the time to build out what a pragmatic, immediate commitment to these values can look like at your organization, and
- Presents a macro, long-term view of the larger legal and regulatory influences on health equity.
