

Report on Supply Chain Compliance Volume 3, Number 9. April 30, 2020

China export controls create medical supply logjam

By Sascha Matuszak

After Chinese medical supplies were criticized for low quality,^[1] including masks, tests and gloves sent to Europe, the Chinese government responded with new rules requiring additional checks before any medical equipment could be exported. The new requirements caused confusion,^[2] first with the new certification process through the National Medical Products Administration, and then with additional checks announced on April 10.

This document is only available to subscribers. Please log in or purchase access.

Purchase Login