

CEP Magazine – May 2020 Coronavirus challenging work processes, supply chains, health care systems, and more

---

By Sascha Matuszak

The world has emerged as generally unprepared for a global pandemic. Certain countries, such as South Korea and Taiwan, have demonstrated an ability to mobilize health care systems and communities to contain and handle the virus, whereas other countries, such as Italy and the United States, have been blindsided by the scope of the virus.

This document is only available to members. Please log in or become a member.

Become a Member Login