The egg is cracked open. Now what are you going to make of it?

This is a great question for us as individuals in the midst of an epic crisis. (Or, if we are extraordinarily lucky, between when I write this and when you read it, we will be in the wake of the crisis.) The world as we know it is not the world as we knew it. This seismic change prompts us—or at least me—to reflect. One lesson relearned in these past pandemic months is how interconnected and interdependent we all are. Even social distancing reveals our dependence on each other.
