Bridging codes: Unveiling the future of compliance in the tech era

By Camille Howard, DBA, CCEP, CCEP-I, CIPP

Welcome to Wired for compliance, a technology-themed column that provides the latest trends and information on technology topics affecting compliance. As a practicing ethics and compliance leader with a private consultancy practice, my passion for technology and innovative solutions comes from my years in compliance and human resources. My experience in both disciplines created an insatiable interest in emerging technologies. During my career, I've supported and led organizations of all sizes. This broad range of experience has allowed me to create a true strategic partner mentality. I am passionate about understanding how organizations can use technology and partnerships to bring strategic value to business.
