Vendor compliance engagement

by Sarah M. Couture

This column has been dedicated to the importance of compliance engagement for those within our organizations. While vendors and other third parties—those external to our organizations yet support our work through provision of supplies and a variety of services—may seem to be outside the circle of those with whom we should effectively engage, government guidance documents discuss the significance of vendor compliance management. Much of our vendor compliance strategy can be implemented through effective compliance engagement with vendors and our operations partners managing vendor relationships.
