

Fraud in Higher Education Institutions: It Only Happens at Other Schools

Joseph Agins, Compliance Officer, Sam Houston State University.

June 1, 2020

- Case studies—Can it really happen here? The answer is yes. Discuss and learn from countless recent examples as we cover several, entirely preventable, frauds at institutions of higher education just like yours
- There are a multitude of factors that contribute to educational institutions being repeat victims of fraud. Understanding these factors can help you detect, deter and minimize occupational fraud from occurring at your institution
- Why do they do it? Delve into the mind of a fraudster to understand how they commit the fraud, and more importantly, how they rationalize and justify crossing the line to well-liked and good employees from your institution

This document is only available to subscribers

Purchase