

Telehealth During a Time of Crisis: Integrating Remote Care Delivery into Your Compliance Program

Nick Merkin, CEO, Compliagent. Erin MacLean, Attorney, MacLean, PC.

May 27, 2020

- The COVID-19 crisis has severely impacted our nation's healthcare delivery system
- Many who needed care were unable to access doctors, hospitals, and other healthcare providers because of stay-at-home orders or quarantine
- These realities have spurred an explosion of interest by providers and patients in the delivery of care via remote modalities, such as telemedicine
- Telemedicine, however, comes with compliance risks, including privacy and security; quality and patient safety; billing and reimbursement; fraud, waste, and abuse; as well as licensure and scope of practice concerns
- Join us to learn some of the regulatory fundamentals of employing a telehealth model in your organization and how to integrate these issues into your healthcare compliance program

This document is only available to subscribers

Purchase